Our Mission
The Association of Farmworker Opportunity Programs’ (AFOP) Children in the Fields Campaign strives to improve the quality of life of migrant and seasonal farmworker children by advocating for enhanced educational opportunities and the elimination of discriminatory federal child labor laws in agriculture.

Current Child Labor Laws in the U.S.
Based on federal data, AFOP estimates as many as 500,000 children work in U.S. fields.

Under the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), the legal age to perform most farm work is only 12 if a parent accompanies the working child. Children who are 12 or older can work unlimited hours in the fields before or after school hours. U.S. law also allows children working in agriculture to perform hazardous work at 16 - other workers must wait until they are 18.

Impact on Farmworker Children
Farmworker children are dropping out of school at an alarming rate. Studies suggest that half the youth who regularly perform farm work never graduate from high school1. AFOP believes that the non-completion rate is much higher. [1Department of Education, Office of Migrant Education]

Children working in agriculture face serious health threats. Children account for about 20 percent of all farm fatalities. More than 10,000 youth between the ages of 10 and 15 years were injured on farms in 2006. Farmworkers regularly work in fields treated with pesticides - some of them are known carcinogens. [National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, Injuries to Youth on Farms and Safety Recommendations, U.S. 2006]

Farmworker children are living in poverty. Most of the estimated 3 million people that work in agriculture in the U.S. earn minimum wage or less and have incomes averaging $14,500 per year1. Child farmworkers risk their health, education and future to earn on average less than $1,000 per year2. [1National Agricultural Workers Survey 2001-2002, p. xi] [2Department of Labor 2000, p. 56]
Our Campaign Goals

- Document the level of child labor in agriculture in California, Ohio, North Carolina, Michigan and Texas
- Educate the public and leaders at the local and national level about the conditions under which these children labor
- Build grassroots and national support for policies and programs that help keep underage farmworker children out of the fields and in school

What You Can Do

We must act now to ensure farmworker children are being afforded the same protection as other children.

- Learn about where your food comes from and educate others about the plight of farmworker children
- Support educational programs for farmworker children
- Advocate for more protections for children who work in agriculture
- Support fair food and fair living wages for all farmworkers
